Bays

Bays and Bows

Many people wonder what the differences are between a bay and a bow window.

Both are beautiful and provide elegant arches and angles, not to mention a gorgeous view.

A standard window is a simple single window whereas bays and bows are created out of three or more windows fitted together at angles. This allows sunlight to enter from each individual angle allowing the glass panes to reflect off each other. The room appears more open, brighter, and significantly more welcoming.

The main difference is a bay window sits on a brick-built structure that protrudes from the normal elevation of the property, while with a bow, it is just the window itself that juts out.

Both definitely have an advantage over traditional flat windows in that they provide a larger non-obstructed viewing area to the outdoors.

Bay windows often are made up of three or five windows of varying sizes, typically with a large fixed picture window in the center and side windows that can be fixed or operating.

The extra space created for sitting or storage can really change the atmosphere of a room.

Bows

Bow windows are made of three to six windows that are all the same size. This gives the design of the space the ability to have a more gradually curved look and feel than the bay design, which has a sharper angle.

Bow windows create the impression the room is bigger than it is, and trick the eye into seeing the entire wall as further away than it actually is.

Oriel windows (pictured right) are perfect for small rooms such as bathrooms, allowing in more light and creating a shelf.

Bow windows are beautiful, especially the Georgian version. They add enormous character and a traditional look to specific types of property. Roof, boards and gallows brackets are all included in the price of our bow windows.

Bay and bow windows from Windows Plus are not only beautiful, but extremely energy efficient as well and over time will save you a great deal of money on your heating bills.

Any traditional window can be transformed into an energy saving focal point that will have your neighbours green with envy.

Whether it's a bay or bow window that has caught your eye, it's definitely a home improvement you'll enjoy every time you walk into the room.
